

Janice M. Harris

Ms. Harris is concerned about the current state of our educational system and the support structures afforded to students. She currently attends college in the city. Janice was not given training in how to find ways to fund her education. As she works to provide herself with an education, her concerns now have shifted to anxiety over how to pay for her rapidly increasing debt to the college. Failing to support motivated students like Janice, we not only deny them opportunities for success, but also our communities suffer by not letting these bright young people use their gifts to make our society better. We need to create ways to further empower and support our students as they work to make a better life for themselves.
